The 4D Followership Model

© Roger Adair 2005

This tool was submitted by Rodger Adair, currently an assistant professor at DeVry University. It is a way of thinking about followers, not leaders. After all, having followers is what makes a leader a leader. Four categories of followership are indicated above, derived from the interplay of three factors: Job Satisfaction, Productivity and Turnover. For example, Disciple is a category of employees who have high job satisfaction, high productivity and low turnover. By contrast, Disengaged is a category marked by low Job Satisfaction, low Productivity and low Turnover. For more about the 4D Followership Model click here.
